Broadcasting Students Wanted

WFOS is housed at the Chesapeake Center for Science and Technology at 1617 Cedar Rd. It is a part of the Career and Technical and Science offerings at the Center. There, students from all six Chesapeake high schools can learn a wide variety of skills ranging from computer networking to cosmetology to auto body repair to welding to auto mechanics and landscaping and design.

WFOS is a part of the Broadcast Communications offerings at the Center. Students can take one or two year's instruction in either Radio Communications or Television Production.

Radio Communications students learn a wide range of skills from production to news delivery and participate in the operation of the radio station.

Television Production students learn all facets of producing television programs and actually participate in creating shows that air on WCTV-48.

Call 547-0134 for more information on these cutting-edge programs.
